“DEATH GOES OVERBOARD” BY DAVID S. PEDERSON

c.2017, Bold Strokes Books | $18.95 | 237 pages

It's a common question when your friends know you're flush with cash. Can I hold a ten for a minute? Can you spot me five? Sure, you probably could but will it be hard to collect on that debt or, as in the new noir mystery, “Death Goes Overboard” by David S. Pederson, will you be paid back swimmingly?

The weekend was all set.

Detective Heath Barrington had everything planned down to the last detail: he and police officer Alan Keyes were heading to a cabin in Northern Wisconsin, just the two of them, under the guise of a “fishing trip.” It was 1947, after all, and discretion was absolutely necessary for two professional gay men, but the getaway would be a great chance to see where their new relationship was going.

Still, despite his and Alan's carefulness, rumors could come from anywhere, which was why Barrington was worried when his boss called him in early one day. Fortunately, the Chief didn't want to quiz Barrington on his love life; he wanted to send the Detective on a special assignment.

Milwaukee law enforcement had been following Gregor Slavinsky ever since the small-time hood got out of prison, assuming that he'd screw up eventually - and that's exactly what happened: word on the street was that Slavinsky recently borrowed $25,000 from Benny Ballentine, a bigger crook and the guy the department really wanted to nab. Both were booked on a Lake Michigan excursion, and something was afoot. The Chief needed Barrington to find out more.

The "fishing trip" cancelled, Barrington boarded a small luxury boat for a weekend tour. With few fellow travelers – two known hoodlums, a henchman, plus a man and his elderly aunt – he thought he'd have no trouble keeping an eye on everyone, especially since the boat's steward was an undercover cop, too. But when a scuffle, a splash, and a missing crook proved otherwise, Barrington knew his assignment had suddenly changed.

Slavinsky was nobody's favorite guy... but who among the handful of possible suspects had the most reason to kill him?

Every cliché ever packed in a noir novel – every single one – seems to be inside "Death Goes Overboard." You've got mobsters, a fedora-wearing detective in a pinstriped suit, seemingly-prim matrons, and man-hungry blondes eager for marriage. It's like an old black-and-white movie in book form – but curiously, you probably won't mind.

You won't mind because author David S. Pederson has packed a lot of else in this novel. You don't normally find a soft-sided, poetry-writing mobster in a noir mystery, for instance, but he's here. And then there's the sweetly chaste, budding romance between two men; not so unusual, again, except that one of them is considering something drastic in order to hide his secret, a side-plot that's historically accurate and that fits.

So this novel is both predictable and not, making it a nice diversion for a weekend or vacation. If that's the kind of book you enjoy, then "Death Goes Overboard" will make you buoyant.

MY BIG GAY LIFE

Brad Loekle

ORCAS AND DOLPHINS AND BEARS... OH MY!

A lesbian polar bear is dead at the San Diego SeaWorld. I know that's a hell of an opening statement but there's just no easy way to put that. It seems like what happened was that Szenja (lesbo-polar bear) had been in love with, and living with, Snowflake (another lesbo-polar bear who I think we all are assuming was the "lipstick" lesbian of the two. Based on the very scientific method of name bias). The two had been together for many years, as all lesbian mammals are at all times. In fact, I dare you to name one lesbian couple you know that hasn't already been a couple for years and years. No one knows how lesbians do it but they just seem to skip the "new relationship" stage and go from small, baby, single lesbians to fully adult lesbians in long term relationships over night. It sort of like how you never see a baby pigeon but you know there must be baby pigeons.

Anyhow, Szenja and Snowflake were perfectly happy together. Sure, it was rough this fall when Trump was elected as both Szenja and Snowflake campaigned hard for Hillary, but they had each other and they were ready to take whatever life, and the zoo assistant who brings them semi-frozen salmon pieces, would through at them. Then SeaWorld sent Snowflake off to another SeaWorld. Hey SeaWorld, you can't just split up lesbians like that. You have to at least stage an affair or something. Have Snowflake leave her cell phone unlocked and dummy up some fake sexting between her and a younger polar bear that lives in Florida. But SeaWorld didn't think that far ahead and there was no amount of Tracy Chapman deep cuts and semi-frozen fish carcasses that could mend her heart. So Szenja died of a broken heart... which is soooooo lesbian of her, let's be honest.

This is the final straw for SeaWorld. I know we all basically wanted them dead when we saw “Blackfish” and I completely agree that no animal, big or small, should have to live like this. But there’s also the reality that Orcas are (kind of) assholes. It’s not their fault, they’re in the Dolphin category and Dolphins are not only totally assholes they’re super rapey. Usually the smarter an animal is the more chance they’re going to have an evil, maniacal side to them. Go watch videos of Orcas taunting seals to death like they’re the aquatic “Mean Girls”. Or go read up on how Orcas have started hunting GREAT WHITE SHARKS just to tear them apart and eat only the shark’s liver. That’s some Hannibal Lector shit, people.

But dolphins, aside from being assholes, are also way too sexual. Many years ago before we’d all been awoken to the idea that maybe dolphins don’t love living in swimming pools and pushing fat tourists around, I went to one of those dolphin experience things. At one point two dolphins sort of surrounded me and got super playful. I thought it’s because they liked me and that it meant I had a deep spiritual connection with all the creatures of the sea. The trainers pulled my fat ass out in a jiffy and explained it was more like the dolphins wanted to have a deep sexual connection with me inside any opening they could find on my body. I was horrified and stunned and more than a little flattered. I mean, come on, they are majestic creatures. It was like being hit on by a really muscular gray inner tube with a large dog’s dick popping out where the valve should be.

So all I’m saying is Orcas and dolphins don’t deserve to be trapped at SeaWorld but since they are, various animals aren’t getting murder-raped as much. But when you start letting lesbian bears die of broken hearts, that is where I draw the line, SeaWorld!

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Once again, I got to spend some time as a tourist again thanks to my cousin. She has never been to Key West before so this was going to be a challenge. With so much to do, and only a few days, where do you start?

Brunch is always necessary, especially since I'm never ready to leave the house before noon! My cousin was looking for some good comfort food and I could think of no better place than Firefly. This southern inspired restaurant has some of the best comfort food you'll find in Key West. With portions so large, you'll need to expand your belt a notch or two. I had the breakfast sandwich on a homemade biscuit and she had the mini grilled cheese with tomato soup dipping sauce. Even though it's listed as a "starter" it's a meal in itself.

Of course, we had to get all the Facebook selfies in so we walked down to the southernmost point, and patiently waited in line to get the obligatory southernmost point picture. A short walk down to the "end of the road," the mile 0 sign for more selfies.

After walking in the heat, a quick stop for a refreshing drink was needed. We stopped at Salsa Loca as my cousin loves authentic sweet tea and you won't find better sweet tea anywhere else. We may have had a quesedilla as well, because I can't say no to good Mexican food.

We were having so much fun getting caught up, I wanted to eat somewhere that we could continue to chat. The best place for that is Santiago's Bodega. Their tapas menu is the perfect way to enjoy many different items and still have a conversation between courses. We each picked three things from the menu, and I can honestly say, I have never had a bad meal here. The food is consistently good. Since the food comes out one plate at a time, everything is hot, and they time it very well so you have just a little time to chat in between stuffing your face. Now, I wouldn't recommend this restaurant for people that don't like to share (we refer to this as food aggression at the animal shelter) as the whole concept is based on small plates for sharing.

After dinner, we had just enough time to catch the last hour of Jennifer McClain performing at SideBar. We were fortunate that she happened to be in town this week as she only performs one night a month here in Key West. In this show, she had two special guests. Brian Hall is known by anyone in town that ever goes out to the theater, and Dante Murray who is best known for his role in Aida playing Nubian king Amonasro.

The trio took on songs from a number of Broadway shows and you would think they have been singing together for years.

If you happen to be in town when there is a Jennifer McClain show, make sure you stop by. You never know who might show up to sing.

PROPER BATHHOUSE ETIQUETTE

A while ago, my friend Michael was telling me a story about an encounter he had and while telling me the details, he spoke of some horrendous bathhouse etiquette. It was at that time that I realized, many others may need a refresher course on proper bathhouse etiquette.

Remember, everyone is there for the same purpose. No one goes to the bathhouse to meet the love of their life (though it has been known to happen.) If you're looking for a boyfriend, start with Match.com.

Shower before you start. Don't assume that the shower you took 2 hours ago is good enough. Your butt crack can get pretty stinky in two hours.

Loud talking is usually not a good idea. Quiet talk about what they're into or maybe even their name is fine. Very few guys want to know what you had for dinner. If it's not going to get in the way when you're getting pounded, they don't need to know about it.

Not everyone you're interested in will be interested in you. If you wander into the steam room and the muscle god immediately gets up to leave, he may have just had too much steam. If this happens again in another location, he may not be interested. Don't stalk him.

Also, be respectful of those that take an interest in you. If someone puts his hand on your leg, regardless of how old and fat he may be, gently push it away. Don't be rude. That will be you in 20 years! Should he be persistent, hand him this article and advise him to read the above paragraph.

Bathhouses are supposed to be dark. Using a pocket light or cell phone to see what people look like is never a good idea. You may piss someone off that didn't want to be seen. In addition, no one is as good looking as your imagination. Trust me, in a dark room, most guys look better and if you just lay back and enjoy the ride, you won't even have to know how old your trick really was.

If you start some action in a public area, don't be upset if some guys want to stand around and watch. If you don't want to be watched, take it to a room.

Should you encounter a little group getting started, it's acceptable to watch. If they're interested in you joining, they'll let you know with a nod, smile or a grope. Don't join in without an invitation. If you try to crash the party, it's likely that all the action will stop and everyone else that was watching, will be pretty annoyed, and rightfully so. They were practicing good etiquette and just watching.

Reciprocation is the key. There are lots of guys there that only want to suck as many cocks as they can. If you know that from earlier quiet conversation, then it's acceptable to walk away once you've made your contribution to the cause. If someone has worked on you for the last 20 minutes to get your goody prize, you should at least offer to assist them in their efforts. They may not want that, but at least you offered. It's rude to dump and run.

Just because he's hot doesn't mean he can charge your batteries. After you've been playing with someone, if it's not working for you, excuse yourself and move on. Be careful with lies such as "I've already gotten off three times" and "I'm not a bottom" because it's likely that in 10 minutes, he's going to see you in the hallway getting fucked by someone and shooting a load all over the place. A simple "this isn't working" gets you out the door with no worries. Plus, if it wasn't working for you, it probably wasn't working for him either.

I'm not going to lecture you all on safe sex. You're all adults and you know the risks. Assume everyone is positive and you can't go wrong. If you let someone in the backdoor, don't assume they're going to wear a condom. To be totally safe, stay on your back so you can see what's going on. Some guys may try to take it off when you can't see.

Know the rules. Bathhouse employees are not known to be the most courteous and by ignoring the rules, you'll only make things worse. Find out if you're expected to strip the bed when you leave and if you may exchange your towel. Also, know exactly how much time you have and if you're within 30 minutes of your "out" time, go up and renew now. Having your room or locker number called out in the middle of the best blowjob you've ever had can really kill the moment.

Tipping is not a dirty word. No, I'm not talking about tipping your trick (that's a whole other subject) but don't be afraid to tip the staff when you leave. It's likely that you'll be back a few times to the same place and the staff will remember you. Also, if you want to exchange your towel a few times, bring a tip each time. The employee will actually look forward to giving you a fresh towel rather than scowling at you.

Don't call ahead to ask "how busy is it?" They make their money on occupancy. If everyone called ahead, no one would go. They're not going to tell you (or they'll lie). If you're that lazy or cheap, try Grindr.

These guidelines aren't just for bathhouses. These should be applied in bookstores, guesthouses, backrooms, and anywhere else guys get together to get it on!

Dear Nana,

If you rubbed a magic lamp and a Genie granted you three wishes, what would they be?

Good Lord?! THAT'S your question? Are you stoned on reefer? I think you're stoned on reefer. Well, anyhoo! At my age I'd probably ask for fairly boring things like for my breasts to migrate back north of my equator or for Ryan Reynolds to realize he's really into old ladies who smell like powder. I'd probably ask for good health too, but considering my age I don't know if even a Genie could pull that one off. One thing I can tell you, though, is there are no Genies. Not that I've ever seen. And most of the things people always say they would ask for are things they could do themselves if they really tried. So if you have 3 wishes in mind, why not figure out how to make them come true yourself? It might take a little longer and be a little harder to pull off, but it beats waiting for some creepy thing in a lamp to give you stuff.

Dear Nana,

My summer body is definitely not where I wanted it to be by now. Any advice on how to get in shape quick before my vacation?

Oh, darling, I sympathize. I spent my whole life until I was in my 60's worried about how my body looked. Had I put on a few pounds? Was I too pale? Was my hair perfect? If I could get back all the time I spent worrying about those things I'd probably gain 10 years worth of time! Time I could have spent eating cake and sleeping with a much better class of men than I settled for. But there's no use crying over spilled milk and there's no use me trying to convince you to stop worrying. You'll figure that out eventually.

When it comes to losing weight quick, there's no magic lamp (see what I did there?). Sure you could french kiss a toilet seat and hope for stomach flu but is that really worth it? You're more than your body and your vacation is supposed to be about letting go not being perfect. So I say, just suck it up and suck it in like the rest of us do when we put on a bathing suit!

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!
