Welcome to Paradise!

If you've been to Key West before, you've probably met Joel "Desiray" Thomson.

Desiray started working at the 801 in 1999 and had been entertaining people from that point forward.

Lovingly referred to as the "Bitch at the 801" she always gave 100%

Taken from us far too soon, she will never be forgotten

STAY SAFE RIDE SMART

A bicycle is a great way to get around, but stay safe by following the rules of the road.

- A bicycle is like any other vehicle, so you must follow the rules of the road.
 - Bicycles must follow all traffic controls such as signs and signals.
 - Bicycles cannot travel the wrong way down a one way street.
 - Bicycles must be ridden on the right hand side of a two way street.
 - You must signal all turns with hand signals.
 - Headsets cannot be worn while cycling.
 - Riding a bike while under the influence can get you a DUI in Florida.
- Lights are required between sunset and sunrise
 - A white light is required in front and a red light in the rear.
- Riding on the sidewalk or crosswalk is permitted but with these provisions
 - Pedestrians have the right of way. Yield to pedestrians.
 - When passing pedestrians, you must signal your intent before doing so.
- Anyone under the age of 16 must wear a helmet.

Here are a few additional tips that you may find helpful.

- Lock up your bike at all times. If not, you'll probably be walking home.
 - Pass the lock through the frame and the front tire.
 - Be careful not to lock your bike to an adjoining bike by accident.
 - If you lock your bike to private property, it may be impounded.
- When approaching occupied cars, be ready to react if the door opens.

Enjoy your time seeing the best of Key West!

GENVOYA® does not cure HIV-1 infection or AIDS. To control HIV-1 infection and decrease HIV-related illnesses, you must keep taking GENVOYA. Ask your healthcare provider if you have questions about how to reduce the risk of passing HIV-1 to others. Always practice safer sex and use condoms to lower the chance of sexual contact with body fluids. Never reuse or share needles or other items that have body fluids on them.

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

What is the most important information I should know about GENVOYA?

GENVOYA may cause serious side effects:

- Worsening of hepatitis B (HBV) infection. GENVOYA is not approved to treat HBV. If you have both HIV-1 and HBV and stop taking GENVOYA, your HBV may suddenly get worse. Do not stop taking GENVOYA without first talking to your healthcare provider, as they will need to monitor your health.

Who should not take GENVOYA?

Do not take GENVOYA if you take:

- Certain prescription medicines for other conditions. It is important to ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist about medicines that should not be taken with GENVOYA. Do not start a new medicine without telling your healthcare provider.
- The herbal supplement St. John's wort.
- Any other medicines to treat HIV-1 infection.

What are the other possible side effects of GENVOYA?

Serious side effects of GENVOYA may also include:

- Changes in your immune system. Your immune system may get stronger and begin to fight infections. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any new symptoms after you start taking GENVOYA.
- Kidney problems, including kidney failure. Your healthcare provider should do blood and urine tests to check your kidneys. If you develop new or worse kidney problems, they may tell you to stop taking GENVOYA.

- Too much lactic acid in your blood (lactic acidosis), which is a serious but rare medical emergency that can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: weakness or being more tired than usual, unusual muscle pain, being short of breath or fast breathing, stomach pain with nausea and vomiting, cold or blue hands and feet, feel dizzy or lightheaded, or a fast or abnormal heartbeat.
- Severe liver problems, which in rare cases can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: skin or the white part of your eyes turns yellow, dark "tea-colored" urine, light-colored stools, loss of appetite for several days or longer, nausea, or stomach-area pain.

The most common side effect of GENVOYA is nausea. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any side effects that bother you or don't go away.

What should I tell my healthcare provider before taking GENVOYA?

- All your health problems. Be sure to tell your healthcare provider if you have or have had any kidney or liver problems, including hepatitis virus infection.
- All the medicines you take, including prescription and over-the-counter medicines, vitamins, and herbal supplements. Other medicines may affect how GENVOYA works. Keep a list of all your medicines and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist. Ask your healthcare provider if it is safe to take GENVOYA with all of your other medicines.
- If you take antacids. Take antacids at least 2 hours before or after you take GENVOYA.
- If you are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. It is not known if GENVOYA can harm your unborn baby. Tell your healthcare provider if you become pregnant while taking GENVOYA.
- If you are breastfeeding (nursing) or plan to breastfeed. Do not breastfeed. HIV-1 can be passed to the baby in breast milk.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch, or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

Please see Important Facts about GENVOYA, including important warnings, on the following page.

Ask your healthcare provider if GENVOYA is right for you.

WHAT IS GENVOYA?

GENVOYA is a 1-pill, once-a-day prescription medicine used to treat HIV-1 in people 12 years and older who weigh at least 77 pounds. It can either be used in people who are starting HIV-1 treatment and have never taken HIV-1 medicines before, or people who are replacing their current HIV-1 medicines and whose healthcare provider determines they meet certain requirements. These include having an undetectable viral load (less than 50 copies/mL) for 6 months or more on their current HIV-1 treatment. GENVOYA combines 4 medicines into 1 pill taken once a day with food. GENVOYA is a complete HIV-1 treatment and should not be used with other HIV-1 medicines.

“SELF-MADE WOMAN: A MEMOIR” BY DENISE CHANTERELLE DUBOIS

c.2017, The University of Wisconsin Press | $26.95 | 224 pages

Your own two hands.

That’s what it took – plus a bit of paint, pencil or pen, rouge and ribbon and rickrack – to make that of which you are proud. You did that. You made it with your own two hands. As in the new book “Self-Made Woman” by Denise Chanterelle DuBois, it takes a lot to craft a new life.

It began near a lakeside cabin in Wisconsin.

DuBois says she was four then, a curious little boy who loved the water – until he fell in and nearly drowned.

Once fished out, he was dressed in girl’s clothing while his dried, and he was enchanted. He fought his mother’s demands that he give the clothing up. That was the beginning of DuBois’ lifetime journey toward womanhood.

Though his parents were both alcoholics, and abusive, Catholic school nuns were the ones who showed DuBois that sexual stimulation could come from humiliation. In grade school, he preferred playing with girls because he was a girl himself, but teachers and nuns forbade it. When embarrassed in class, he felt stirrings; he asked playmates to spank him, and he learned to welcome negative attention.

This led to petty theft and a secret life: DuBois began sneaking into his sister's closet to wear her clothing. He broke into random buildings to steal panties from strangers, and he lost a babysitting job when his client's child caught him wearing his client's lingerie; the ensuing humiliation only enhanced the experience. He dabbled in domination by being a slave to women who wanted his money. He experimented with drugs and alcohol; there were run-ins with the law. He became suicidal.

And yet – there were bright moments in his life. DuBois fell in love with a woman who went along with fetishes that had grown into full-blown obsessions. He made friends - albeit, friends who were into drugs. He got married. And he started learning what it would take to be the woman he always knew he really was...

“Self-Made Woman” is a lot of things. It's sad. Poignant. Scary. It's also TMI sometimes and, at just over 200 pages, it's a bit too long.

From Wisconsin childhood to womanhood in Bangkok, author Denise Chanterelle DuBois tells readers of a multi-city, lifetime self-search, in an account that feels overly detailed and overstuffed. Reading it is akin to being held captive by someone who really needs to tell all, including unabashed details about the world of submission and female domination. Those details are titillating for those who share DuBois' fetishes, but cruelty and graphicness make them wince-worthy. Add in memories of drug and alcohol abuse and an account of imprisonment that seemed rushed and you could have a mess of unreadability, were it not for the overall uniqueness, vulnerability, and the truthfulness in this tale.

When the story itself lags, those are the things that redeem it. They're what make this matter-of-factly-told memoir one that sets itself apart by its brutal honesty. It's what will make you want to put “Self-Made Woman” in your hands.

MY BIG GAY LIFE

Brad Loekle

BASQUIAT WOULD BE... PROUD?

I was just recently in Bilbao, Spain and decided to spend a day at the Guggenheim there. The Guggenheim museums have always been among my favorite. Though I spent all of my twenties and much of my thirties in New York City, it is actually the Venice, Italy Guggenheim that was my first "Gugg". The Venice Gugg was actually Peg Guggenheim's personal Venetian Palace that she had turned into a museum for her collection. I've always loved her. She was the black sheep of the family with flamboyant tastes, Avant garde thoughts, a peculiar accent and she tended to fuck a lot of the artists she supported. A woman after my own heart! My first trip to Venice in 2010 was also my first trip to her Palace turned museum and I fell in love with it, her, and the city all at once. It was quite the existential orgy!

The Bilbao Guggenheim, though not my first, is probably my favorite. The city of Bilbao is one of those lovely little gems along the Spanish coast that gets just enough attention to be eclectic but not enough attention to be a tourist trap. On this most recent stroll through the Bilbao Gugg I decided to take a behind the scenes tour. It would allow me a chance to see all the back rooms where they do the framing, restoration, curation, etc. I had a lovely tour guide who, as is always the case with art tour guides, seemed to want to tell me the most pedestrian stories about the artists and the art itself. It always ends up being me who then tells them things I've learned over the years about my favorite arts or pieces of work. We have a laugh, I shock them a bit, and I usually give them some juicy tid bits that they can use in the future.

It just so happened that they were moving a Basquiat from the gallery back behind closed doors because it was going to briefly go join a bunch of other Basquiats for a retrospective. All major works of art travel with a courier. A person who is responsible for never leaving the side of the work of art while it's in motion. They also, of course, nowadays put GPS trackers on the art and so on. It just so happened that the courier of this particular Basquiat was a handsome young Basque man whose eyes seemed to unbutton my pants just by glancing at them.

The courier and I got to chatting about which Basquiat it was while we all waited for the "largest freight elevator in Europe" (as they so proudly proclaimed) to come get us. Since the elevator often moves works of art that are very fragile, it moves very slow. My friends and our tour guide decided to take the stairs the three flights up to our next location. I, as a general rule, do not take stairs. Stairs are a fat kid's mortal enemy. Also I wasn't going to miss a chance to be in an enclosed space with both a work of art and a courier who looked like a wet dream. The elevator arrived and he rolled the Basquiat in, with me in toe behind him. As soon as the doors were closed he turned to me to display the magnificently architectural tent he had created in his crotch area. Being a lover of all forms of art, I decided immediately that I needed to inspect this exhibition closer. It was a dynamic work of art that was certainly more interactive than the Basquiat that acted like a backdrop. I'd even go so far to say as this massive work of living art belonged more in a petting zoo than a stale gallery. And pet it I did. With my mouth. All the way up to the top floor. One would almost think this ridiculously slow elevator was built for this express purpose. Almost.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Not everyone shows their true colors all the time. Sometimes it takes something monumental to get people to show who they really are. Recently, hurricane Irma came through the keys and it really showed us how people really act in a crisis.

Right after the storm, as the winds died down and the flood water receded, people came to realize that Key West was plunged into a very primitive island. There was no running water, no electricity and no cell service.

This is when a few businesses in particular jumped into action and did what they do best, they fed people. This is just a small sample of the many businesses that opened up their doors and fed anyone that needed a meal, and with no refrigeration or electricity, that was almost everyone. There were no strings attached and no expectations, just come by and enjoy a meal.

This list is by no means complete, just a small sampling of the many businesses that provided food, a cold beverage, a place to charge a device, and one of the most important things when you are completely cut off from the outside world, camaraderie and companionship.

ASK NANA

E-mail your questions to nana@keywestgayrag.com

Dear Nana,

What's the greatest scare you've ever had? Since it's almost Halloween and all.

Well, last November 8th was definitely up there in the top three, I can tell you that much! But then, again, that now seems like child's play compared to the cornucopia of crazy that seem to be all the rage in America. And God knows America loves rage. There was also that time when I was 21 and I thought I was pregnant... and I wasn't married. Which back then could have practically gotten me burned at the stake as a witch. But luckily I drank a lot of gin for a week and rode a bicycle to work using on the cobblestone streets in the area and before you know it, my time of the month arrived! But the scariest "fright" anyone ever gave me was how my first husband proposed to me. I woke up one morning and he was already awake and sort of staring over me. Not with a knife or anything but clearly eager for me to wake up. He then asked me if I noticed anything different. I said, "aside from you glaring over me at 9am on a weekend?"

I then proceeded to look around the room to see if he'd bought something for the house or if there was a present wrapped up for me. It was nowhere near my birthday so I couldn't figure out what he wanted me to notice. Then I realized my hand was shiny. Well, one of my fingers to be precise. The bastard had slipped an engagement ring on my finger while I was asleep and then once I saw it, THEN he asked me to marry him. Talk about putting the cart before the horse! Lucky for him he had a huge dick AND a huge diamond. And I've always found both of those things to be a girl's best friend. But it was still the scariest morning of my life for at least 90 seconds.

Dear Nana,

Do you give out candy? If so how much and what kinds? I'm thinking about giving out something other than candy this year just because it's bad for children. I was thinking maybe granola bars or fruit leather. What are your thoughts on that?

My thoughts on that are that you are an asshole. It's Halloween. We give out pounds of processed sugar to other people's kids. That's what we do. So either turn out your porch light and pretend not to be home or go get $50 worth of something deliciously terrible and stop trying to ruin children's childhood. That is their parent's job. Granola bars?! You should be ashamed of yourself. Fruit Leather... I'd spit on you if I could. Yes, if we gave kids candy every single day the way we do on Halloween, it would be very bad for them. But since you get to occasionally use potato chips as a utensil to eat a whole pint of Ben & Jerry's when you have a bad week at work, the children of your neighborhood have to have one candy-filled fun day of their boring, pre-pubescent year. At least you didn't say you were going to give out pennies. When I was a girl some adult gave us all pennies so I got all the kids together, we put the pennies in a roll, and we threw it through his upstairs window. Trick or Treat, bitch!

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!
